This Is the Title

John P. Smith
Assistant Professor
School of Law
Discovery University
Jamestown, VA, United States
john.smith@discovery.edu

Arthur King*
Senior Lecturer
Department of Cyber Security
University of Camelot
Avalon, United Kingdom
aking@camelot.ac.uk

Abstract: This is the article abstract; it should be about 200 to 300 words long. It summarizes the article, outlining the basic structure, main hypothesis and conclusions.

Keywords: three to six keywords or short keyword phrases, non-capitalized, separated with commas

Introduction

This is the text of the introduction. The paper is to be written in Times New Roman, 11 pt, single-spaced, formatted in a single column, no paragraph indentation.

Second Section

Further sections follow this format. If you need to structure the text further, you can use second and third-level headings.

This Is the Second-Level Heading Format

Please do not use numerical numbering. Instead, label these headings with letters or leave them unnumbered.

This Is the Third-Level Heading Format

Use these headings if you need to further sub-divide your article.

Third Section

This is yet another section of your article. When referring to your text, refer to Sections, not to page numbers.

> Quotations of three or more lines should be put in a separate paragraph, introduced usually by a colon: The paragraph is then indented on both sides, adjusted to a block format and centred, without quotation marks.

Conclusion

And this is the conclusion.

Acknowledgements

Here you can, but do not have to, say thank you to your colleagues, family or your pet animal. It is not necessary to thank the CyCon reviewers for their comments.